He has been made a freeman, a citizen and a voter. What else? To this extent laws can certainly be made effectual. But no further. To "take an other step in advance" is impossible in law. The very next step beyond is an invasion of human nature. Yet the more irresponsible of the Radical leaders will attempt to force the Republicans to take it, and in doing so will divide their strength. Every one of the Southern States reconstructed under the Fifteenth amendment will fall into the hands of the Democratic party and the Republicans can not risk a division in the North. On suffrage they can hold together—not on any other proposition concerning the negro. sufficient accuracy to determine in advance precisely how this or that circumstance or this or that principle is going to affect the main project which he has in view. Omens or evil become blessings in disguise. Anticipations of good vanish with the realization. We are constantly deceiving our neighbors. Presently we get to deceiving ourselves.

Parties are especially exposed to delusions of this nature. They are at once passionate and imaginative, and an idea fairly set in motion seems to run along the entire line until it possesses all its length and thickness. This is due partly to ignorance and partly to a mechanical habit of following. We fail? "any Chilly "see "We fail?" "any Chilly "see "Chilly "see" "and the majority of the voters say so? Why not? ## WEDNESDAY BORSING, JANUARY 27, 1870.

The Prime Minister of France.

M. Olivier, it seems, lives very simply and urosentatiously is two suites of rooms, for which he pays but are hundred dollars a year. This Prime Minister of France has but one servant, who serves him as cook, housemaid, and secretary. His spartments are furnished with simplicity, comfort, and elegance combined, while here and there are scattered a few rare works of art. His library is his favorite resort, and the books he reads most are Pascalla "Licitives Provinciales" and St. Narcis d'Assina's "Floretti." The wails of his library are hung with portraits of Raphael, Descartes, Bossuet, Mirabeau, Pascal, Molliere, Becheven, Lamartine, and Desk. Plante, the pinnist, and Presult, the sculptor, are his intimate friends, and Lizzt always stays with him when he visit se Paris.

II. Carlotte Patti, of the coming of M ile Carlotta Patti. The years of intense study which she has devoted to the cultivation of her naturally fine voice has borne its fruit. The quality, tone and compass of her voice have been all commented upon by the best critics of the musical world. She has passed triumphantly through the severest ordeals and critical test, but the great culture bestowed upon her has enabled her to achieve brilliant successes under disadvantages that would have aposalled.

III. The deluded women of Utah have actually met in conveution and passed a series of resolutions, which were evidently prompted by their husbands, favoring polygamy, and denousing the recent legislative action of the Government in reference to Utah. The many speeches delivered and the resolutions passed all bear the mark of having been prepared by the tyrannical wetches who are pursuing their shird life and violating the very spirit of our social laws in Utah. This Mormon question is rapidly assuming proportions—which will force it upon the immediate consideration of Congress. The farcical forbearance of permitting in this country such a shameful disregard of all moral and Christian law has now become no longer a virtue, and shameful disregard of all moral and Christian law has now become no longer a virtue, and the question of polygamy must be disposed of. The dissensions in the Mormon church are still developing. Many of the most influential men among them are opposed to polygamy, and if the Government will only stretch forth its strong arm in time, the relations of Utah with the General Government may yet be amicably settled.

One of the most interesting books of the day is the biography of Prof Faraday, by Dr. Bence Jones, Secretary of the Royal Institution, which has just been issued by Messra. J. B. Lippincott & Co. It is a clear, concise, and appreciative history of his early life, scientific labors, religious optnious, and social relations. His uninterrupted and disinterested friendship for Mr. Abbutt is placed in a most pleasing light. The story of his youthful struggles, first as a journeyman bookbinder, then of his attenuance on the lectures of the great his Hemman. Sir Humphrey Davy, of his subsequent inter-course with, and studies under, that distinguished man, of his labors as an assessment in the Laboratory of the Royal Institution, of his guished man, of his labors as an assession to the Laboratory of the Royal Institution, of his brilliant success as a lecturer on scientific subjects, and of his travels abroad with Davy, is told graphically and tersely. Notwithstanding his great application to profound pursuits, he gave proof of being as much a man of heart as of head. In his domestic relations he was a most amiable and lovable character, and his married life was singularly happy, his correspondence with his wife being full of strong and deep affection. His happiest moments were spent in the quiet, comfore, and seclusion of his own home. In one of risletters he writes thus to his wife: "What can I call myself to coavey most perfectly my affection and love to you?
